Boodle Hatfield Case Study

"CBS ... showed great care in exactly meeting our criteria."

Ensuring we meet our client's needs.

Boodle Hatfield, one of the oldest London legal practices, have grown their business in recent years and as a result decided to move to prestigious new offices in New Bond Street.

Their main requirement was to create an improved, modern working environment in which fast access to local document storage for each staff member was key. All plans had to be flexible enough to allow for future increases in headcount in line with Boodle Hatfield's strategic growth plans.

CBS were selected to advise Boodle Hatfield on the choice and procurement of new furniture for all the office areas as well as a state of the art suite of client meeting rooms.

The local storage issue was fully addressed by the use of 'Towers' alongside each workstation in the open plan areas giving all staff access to the documents they needed at their desktop. Professional space planning has ensured there is ample room to accommodate additional employees as required.

Stella Smith of Boodle Hatfield commented on working with CBS:

"In the competitive pitch stage they showed great care in exactly meeting our criteria, and afterwards worked very closely with us to fine-tune our final choice of furniture to ensure that we bought products which suited our needs at the right price. They met a tight deadline to install all of the furniture on time, and provided an excellent after-care service to ensure that the staff were delighted with their new environment from the very beginning.

"We were impressed with their practical, proactive and friendly approach throughout the project."
